TARIFF REFORM AND ITS KIND

The Philadelphia Record says all the Republican declarations on the tariff, from the moderate one of Minnesota to the gross absurdity of Pennsylvania, show that the Dingley tariff will be revised only in the high protection sense. The Record goes on to say:

"No enemy will be permitted to lay profane hands on the sacred edifice. That that means has been seen more than once in the history of the party protection. That there may be no mistake as to its present purpose a resolution introduced by Sen. E. A. Tamm provides that the Committee of Ways and Means, of which he is the chairman, shall take up the subject during the summer vacation of Congress and use the materials collected by government agents and experts as basis for future revision. With this campaign maneuver the stand-patters and the trusts are entirely satisfied, in that it foreshadows an interminable play in making such tariff revision only as will serve their interests. At the same time it stops the mouths of such republican friends of tariff reform as prefer party to the public welfare. Thus with the stand-patters and trusts in one ring and the tariff reformers in the other, the republican party will march in perfect harmony to accomplish the main end in the reservation of political power."

(Ramsey Recorder)

Now that another Presidential campaign is on voters generally are giving more or less thought to the candidates, the parties and the platforms. Opinions from all quarters are being put forth and campaign tactics are being used in all their old-time variety. There seems little doubt that William J. Bryan will head the ticket for the Democrats and a pretty well-defined idea of the Democratic platform may be formulated.

The Republicans seem to have taken these things for granted and already the same tactics are being used concerning the Democratic candidate in particular and the party generally, that all the country has seen in the past.

The Republican campaigners will have to face a different lot of voters this fall than they have for a great many years. And that includes the rank and file of their own party. Needless to say there is a more independent army of voters in the country now than ever and furthermore most of them are of the "show me" kind. Previously they have listened to the talks that have been used to belittle W. J. Bryan. It has been a favorite weapon with the republicans. But the malignant lance has been dulled by all this usage, in season and out, so that Mr. Republican voter himself is not going to be so readily persuaded that the democratic head of the ticket is all things he has been termed.

Voters are going to ask themselves a few questions about William Jennings Bryan this fall. They have watched Roosevelt pirouette in all directions, forward and backward, and while these things were going on party organs have been applying the lash to the back of the great commoner, with the evident purpose of distracting attention from their own irrational leader. In fact the very things that Bryan would be supposedly guilty of in the presidential chair have been practiced by the present incumbent until the entire country has been wearied and is waiting for relief. Now they have seen the republican party nominate a man pledged soul and body to Roosevelt and any hoped for relief has been absolutely destroyed. The voters of the country have been fooled and fooled badly, and all kinds of Republican prosperity and full-dinner-pail talk will not cause them to take another morsel of it.

They are going to ask themselves and each other why W. J. Bryan has kept himself endeared to so many of his countrymen all these years; why he has gained in popularity and has been advanced by his constituents as their choice for the greatest office of all. They will enquire why such a statesman, orator and student is not able to assume the duties of President and serve his country as well as any man. They will remind themselves that those things most strongly advocated by the democratic leader have been taken up by Roosevelt, but that only a half-hearted effort has been able to bring them to issue. That in all probability the man whom the republicans have so long adored is the real one to whom they can look for persistent and consistent effort to bring about desired results.

There are many things the republican party will have to answer for that the entire country will not soon forget. Relief from other quarters is necessary and every voter before he casts his ballot is going to ask himself, Why is Bryan?
